BOOTHBAY - Heber Charles "Chick" Anderson, 82, longtime operator of the Anderson and Gaw Inc. fuel company and a former teacher and coach, died Thursday at St. Andrews Hospital after a brief illness.

From 1930 until 1944, Mr. Anderson taught math at Boothbay Harbor High School, where he also coached baseball, basketball and football.

PASSAGES

In 1946, Mr. Anderson bought Marson Bros. Fuel Co., along with the late Earl Gaw, which they operated as Anderson and Gaw for many years.

Charles Anderson

"He made more money playing professional baseball than he did teaching," said his son, H. William Anderson. "When he couldn't play ball anymore, he decided he had to make more money than he did teaching."

Anderson and Gaw, on a wharf at Boothbay Harbor, was a plumbing and heating company that sold bottled gas, range and fuel oils, fertilizer, grain and seeds. "He gave away a lot of fuel oil to needy families in the Boothbay region," said his son.

A master plumber, much of Mr. Anderson's job consisted of drawing plans for duct work and heating systems. He sold the business in 1978.

Born in Randolph, a son of Heber S. and Anne Anderson, he graduated from Gardiner High School in 1926 and from Bates College in 1930. He was on the baseball team at Bates.

In recent years, he took pride in the athletic accomplishments of his grandchildren. Granddaughter Holly Anderson of Cumberland was the 1988 women's state golf champion, and a grandson, Jon Anderson, is a catcher for Iowa's Quad City Angels, a minor league team.

Mr. Anderson was a 40-year member of the Rotary, a 32nd degree member of Bayview Masons, a member of the Kora Shrine, the Knights of Pythias, Boothbay Harbor Congregational Church and the Boothbay Region Country Club.

Surviving are his wife of 54 years, Althea Norton Anderson; two sons, H. William of Cumberland and Charles E., of Tampa, Fla.; and three grandchildren.
