Maurice 'Red' Blenn Dyer

popular Standish gas station operator

STANDISH — Maurice "Red" Blenn Dyer, 92, the longtime proprietor of a service station at Standish Corner, died Tuesday at his home at Falmouth House at Ocean View.

For 25 years, Mr. Dyer owned and operated Dyer's Shell Station on Route 25 near the center of Standish's commercial district. He was well-known around town for putting in long hours at the station pumping gas, changing tires and running the low truck. The station was open from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. seven days a week, and Mr. Dyer was there most of that time.

"His specialty was just being there," said his daughter, Joyce A. Milliken. "For gas or mechanics. If anybody needed anything they came to him. He was even known to the people coming down from Cornish, Fryeburg and other towns to the west. They always knew he would be open."

Mr. Dyer had worked during the 1930s for the gas station's original owners, and eventually bought them out. He also sold fruit door to door during the Depression, on the days he didn't work at the gas station.

"He was a Yankee trader," said his daughter. "At the filling station he used to sell televisions, Philco appliances, refrigerators." Mr. Dyer also traded and sold cars and bicycles at the station, said his daughter. "He would buy and sell anything that he could make a dollar on."

In 1953, when he built a new gas station, he moved the old building next door and converted it into Marjo's Dairy Bar, which he and his wife, Margaret Bachelder Dyer, ran for about 10 years.

Mr. Dyer sold the Shell station and retired in 1959. After that he worked locally for a painting contractor, and also for two years for the Maine Turnpike Authority, retiring in 1967.

He continued to trade in merchandise as a hobby, and specialized in buying bicycles and lawn mowers at yard sales, fixing them and sell them on his lawn on Route 25.

He enjoyed travel, and in recent years he and his wife went on two cross-country bus trips of 36 days each.

Born in Otisfield, a son of Walter and Florence Witham Dyer, he attended Harrison schools. As a young man, he was a lineman for Central Maine Power Co.

He was a 50-year member of the Standish Masons.

The Dyers lived from 1936 until 1966 on Route 25 near the filling station. After that he moved to a house near Two Trails, and spent winters in St. Petersburg, Fla., for 30 years.

A son, Blenn Dyer, died in 1967.

Surviving are his wife of 63 years, Margaret Bachelder Dyer of Falmouth; a daughter, Mrs. Elwood R. (Joyce A.) Milliken of Standish; two grandchildren, Sandra Grant of South Freeport and Sharon Perkins of West Baldwin; and three great-grandchildren, Valerie Perkins and Joel Perkins, both of West Baldwin, and Zachery W. Grant of South Freeport.

A spring graveside service will be held at Riverside Cemetery, Cornish. Arrangements are by Neal and York Funeral Home, Kezar Falls.
