World War

Thomaston, July 29. — Rodney E. Feyler, 62, former Maine Commissioner of Sea and Shore Fisheries and at one time known as the "scallop king" of the Atlantic Coast, died today in his Hyler Street home.

He had been in ill health since he suffered an attack of virus pneumonia two years ago, but until recently had been at the office of his Rockland fish and lobster plant a short time each week.

Mr. Feyler, who played a prominent part in the fulfillment of his prediction that Rockland would become one of the leading fishing ports in New England, was born here, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eben Feyler, and practically all his life was devoted to the fishing industry.

His first venture in the scallop trade was peddling 25 pounds about the city of Rockland, a task which required all day to dispose of his stock, he said. Later he began to dispose of scallops for fishermen hereabouts, and by 1927 he was buying and selling more scallops than all the other dealers along the coast, winning for himself the title of "king" of the trade.

Appointed commissioner by Gov. Louis J. Brann, as a successor to Horatio C. Crie of Rockland, Mr. Feyler immediately undertook a program for the conservation, propagation and exploitation of Maine's fishing industry and for the betterment of conditions among the men engaged in it.

His projects, which envisioned an era when at least 50,000 persons in this State would be employed in fishing and fish-processing, received the endorsement of many leading citizens. He made a thorough study of the different uses of fish by-products, and at one time investigated a process developed by Germans for the manufacture of leather from fish skins.

With Governor Brann, he succeeded in inducing the government to buy surplus Maine fish and the two led in the fight against the misrepresentation of crawfish as lobsters. Many of the old theories in administering the affairs of the sea and shore department were discarded by Mr. Feyler when he became commissioner.

He requested reappointment by Governor Lewis O. Barrows, but was succeeded by Arthur R. Greenleaf of Boothbay Harbor.

Mr. Feyler, who served as acting manager for the big plant of the General Seafoods Corporation when it opened here three years ago, conducted an extensive fish and lobster business, his products going to the majority of the states in the Union. He owned a huge filleting plant and once had a large cold storage and freezing establishment.

Surviving are his widow, Gertrude; a son, Richard, associated with him in business; a daughter, Mrs. Barbara Wadsworth, Camden; five grandchildren; a brother, Walter, and three sisters, Miss Mary Feyler, Mrs. Ruth Wallace and Mrs. Lista Hyler, all of Thomaston.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 2 p. m. Tuesday, and interment will be in the village cemetery.

L. C. Fickett, Retired Ship Master, Dies

Capt. Leaman C. Fickett, 73, of 1757 Washington Avenue, one of the last of the old square rigger masters, died Monday morning in Sailors' Sunn Harbor, Staten Island, N. Y., where he had resided since 1929. He had been in failing health about three years.

Captain Fickett, born March 13, 1867, at Harrington, of an old seafaring family, followed the sea man and boy all his life. He had an all-coverage license for the seven seas and sailed his square-rigged and schooner-rigged ships to all parts of the world.

In the years before his retirement he was master for the Emery fleet of Boston and the Crowell & Thurlow fleet of the same port. One of his last schooners was the four-masted Rockland-built Theoline, which he commanded four years. At the outbreak of the World War he was skipper of a schooner visiting Italy on a voyage.

For 45 years Captain Fickett had resided in Portland before going to the famous Staten Island institution for veteran sailors. He was a member of the New York and Boston Marine Societies and Atlantic Lodge of Masons here.
