DOVER-FOXCROFT — Dr. Edwin T. Wyman of Brookline, Mass., a pediatrician in Boston from 1914 until 1969, died Nov. 13 in Dover-Foxcroft at the age of 94. A member of the medical staff of Children's Hospital Medical Center since 1914, Dr. Wyman was one of Boston's first pediatricians, and generations of Bostonians remember him in his office at 319 Longwood Avenue, with his dog constantly at his side. Throughout his career, he was also an instructor in pediatrics at Harvard Medical School. Born on Oct. 9, 1886, in Sebec, Dr. Wyman grew up the son of the owner of the town's general store. He attended Higgins Classical Institute and then Tufts Medical

Dr. Wyman came from a strong medical tradition in Maine, as his maternal grandfather, great-grandfather, and uncle were all general practitioners in central Maine. He never lost his affinity for Maine, and for years during his summer vacation, ran pediatric clinics for the residents of Sebec. He never really considered himself a resident of Massachusetts although he lived there for most of his life. Dr. His long career in pediatric practice allowed three generations in some families to be cared for by him. Dr. Wyman was a member of the American Medical Association, the Pediatric Society, (president, 1930), the American Pediatric Society, the board of directors of the Massachusetts Physicians, the Masons, and the Military Order of the World War. Dr. Wyman leaves a daughter, Alice Heather Crozier of Montreal, and a son, Edwin T. Wyman Jr. of Boston, as well as six grandchildren. A graveside service was held in Sebec, on Sunday, Nov. 16, 1980.

Remarks

Samuel Russell Wyman, 89, a longtime carpenter and mechanic who enjoyed Saturday night dances and the Boston Red Sox, died Monday at the Barron Center.

Mr. Wyman held a variety of occupations during his long working career. In the 1920s, he was a woodsman and a truck driver for his father at the family's portable sawmill. They bought wood lots in Maine and New Hampshire and cut and milled the trees on site.

"My grandfather had a ready source of laborers in his 13 children," said Mr. Wyman's son, Donald Wyman. "They all pitched in, doing whatever, to make the sawmill operation go. When the land had been cleared of its useful timber, they would move to another lot."

The portable sawmill was a primitive operation, using mostly manual labor. "My grandfather used to employ finish woodchoppers with double-bitted axes. My father used to work the teams of horses in the woods, yarding the logs that were cut during the day."

In the 1930s, Mr. Wyman worked at constructing electrical power lines in New Hampshire and Massachusetts. He also was a miner in a feldspar quarry in Gilsum, N.H., and an auto mechanic for several years at his brother's garage in Alton, N.H.

When World War II broke out, he was working as a carpenter. He ended up moving to Portland to work on the construction of some of the buildings at the South Portland shipyards.

He settled in the Stroudwater neighborhood and for many years worked as a maintenance carpenter for the Pocahontas Coal Co. on Commercial Street in Portland. That large coal operation was on Long Wharf, now the site of DiMillo's Restaurant and Marina. "They had big cranes that dug coal out of the barges and into railroad gondola cars," said his son.

Before retiring in the late 1960s, Mr. Wyman was an auto mechanic and body man for Elwell's Garage and Maister's Chevrolet, both in Westbrook.

Born in Lincoln, a son of Fred Darling and Delia Hersey Wyman, he attended schools in Lincoln, Porter and Manchester, N.H.

For many years, Mr. Wyman and his wife, Ruth Wiggitt Pratt Wyman, enjoyed dancing every Saturday night.

He was a lifelong fan of the Boston Red Sox. "Most everybody else had given them up two or three times," said his son, "but he still hung on."

Mrs. Wyman died in 1987 after 61 years of marriage. Besides Stroudwater, they lived in Westbrook and East Sebago.

PASSAGES

Each day the newspaper selects one obituary and seeks to learn more about the life of a person who has lived and worked in Southern Maine. We look for a person who has made a mark on the community or the person's family and circle of friends in small but lasting ways.

Russell Wyman

Mr. Wyman was a member of the Red Men, the Masons and the Grange.

Surviving are two sons, Donald E. of Falmouth and Richard P. of North Windham; a sister, Marie Hunt of Fresno, Calif.; three brothers, James T. of Keene, N.H., and Fort Charlotte, Fla., Paul S. of Clearwater, Fla., and Clair E. of West Swanzey, N.H., and Englewood, Fla.; six grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

A funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday at Dolby Funeral Chapel, Windham. Burial will follow in Brooklawn Memorial Park.
